CECP COMPANIES

Just as companies began transitioning their employee- and community-engagement strategies from immediate relief to long term response, companies have been prioritizing their attention and actions to the national civil unrest that is underway. CECP has been collecting examples of anti-discrimination statements by companies, and have compiled an Issue Brief on resources and list of organizations working to advance racial equity and social justice.

THE GLOBAL EXCHANGE CORNER

In these challenging times, CECP's Global Exchange \(GX\) is compiling innovative ideas of how companies around the world (and GX members) are undertaking local, national, and international initiatives in the fight against Covid-19.

Business in the Community \(BITC\), CECP's GX partner in the United Kingdom launched in April the National Business Response Network. Its activities focus on four key areas to help communities navigate their way through the coronavirus pandemic; food, technology, community support, and small businesses - with food being the most matched request.

At just five weeks old, Network has made over 400 matches between community groups, schools and charities, and UK businesses that have been able to meet their urgent needs during the Covid-19 pandemic. Also, BITC received a £1m investment from the London Stock Exchange Group, which will help it to rapidly scale up the response network and match more community organizations and charities that need urgent support with the businesses that can provide it.
